

James Madison University: Strategic Plan for Internationalization 2024-2028

The Center for Global Engagement (CGE) at James Madison University (JMU) serves as the central university office concerning international education, with oversight of all James Madison University and non-JMU study abroad programs; visa and reporting processes for international students and scholars; and the development of curricula, faculty experiences and programs that address international issues and assess international education programs/experiences. The CGE is committed to the principle that international experiences and perspectives are essential to every JMU student, faculty, and staff. To that end, the CGE promotes and encourages critical awareness of world issues; knowledge of and an appreciation for other cultures, languages, and belief systems; global community; and commitment to engagement at the international level, that we may educate active and responsible global citizens.

Preamble

CGE is excited to introduce its 2024-2028 Strategic Plan, a testament to our dedication to fostering innovative, collaborative, and sustainable global engagement across the university community. This new plan builds on our successes while setting ambitious goals to sustain and expand existing programs, explore innovative initiatives, and enhance the excellence and impact of global engagement efforts. In a world that is increasingly interconnected, it is more important than ever to prepare our students, faculty, and staff to thrive in a globalized society. Through this plan, we aim to cultivate a community that values global perspectives, fosters intercultural competence, and addresses global challenges with creativity and purpose. With a strong emphasis on enriching student and faculty experiences, supporting international exchange, and building robust partnerships, the plan outlines four key goals and the strategies we will employ to achieve comprehensive internationalization at JMU.
